Red Cross nurses gathered in the infield, along with others, for a ceremony to celebrate the 1942 Kentucky Derby.

A group of jockeys looks out on the activities of Derby day. They get all the best seats in the house!

Hanging out on the backside in 1940.

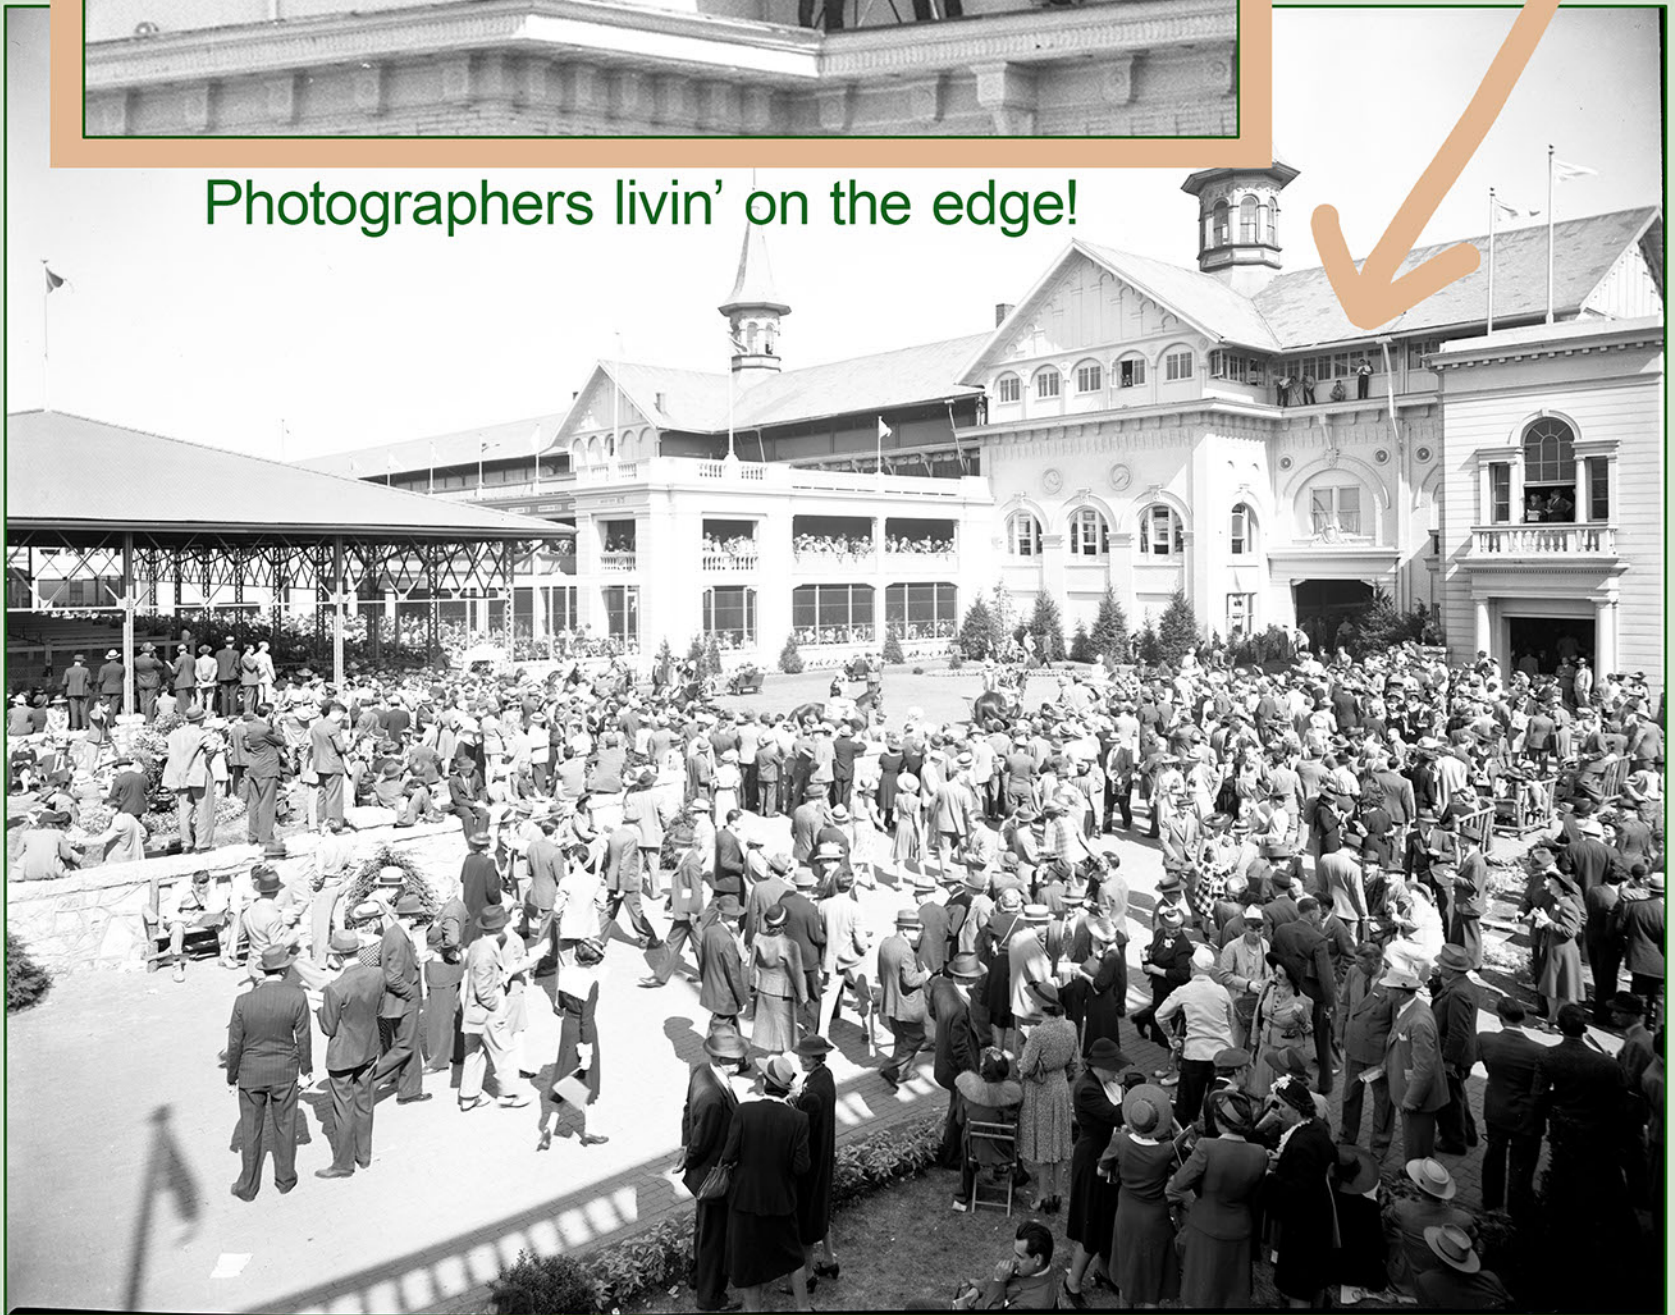

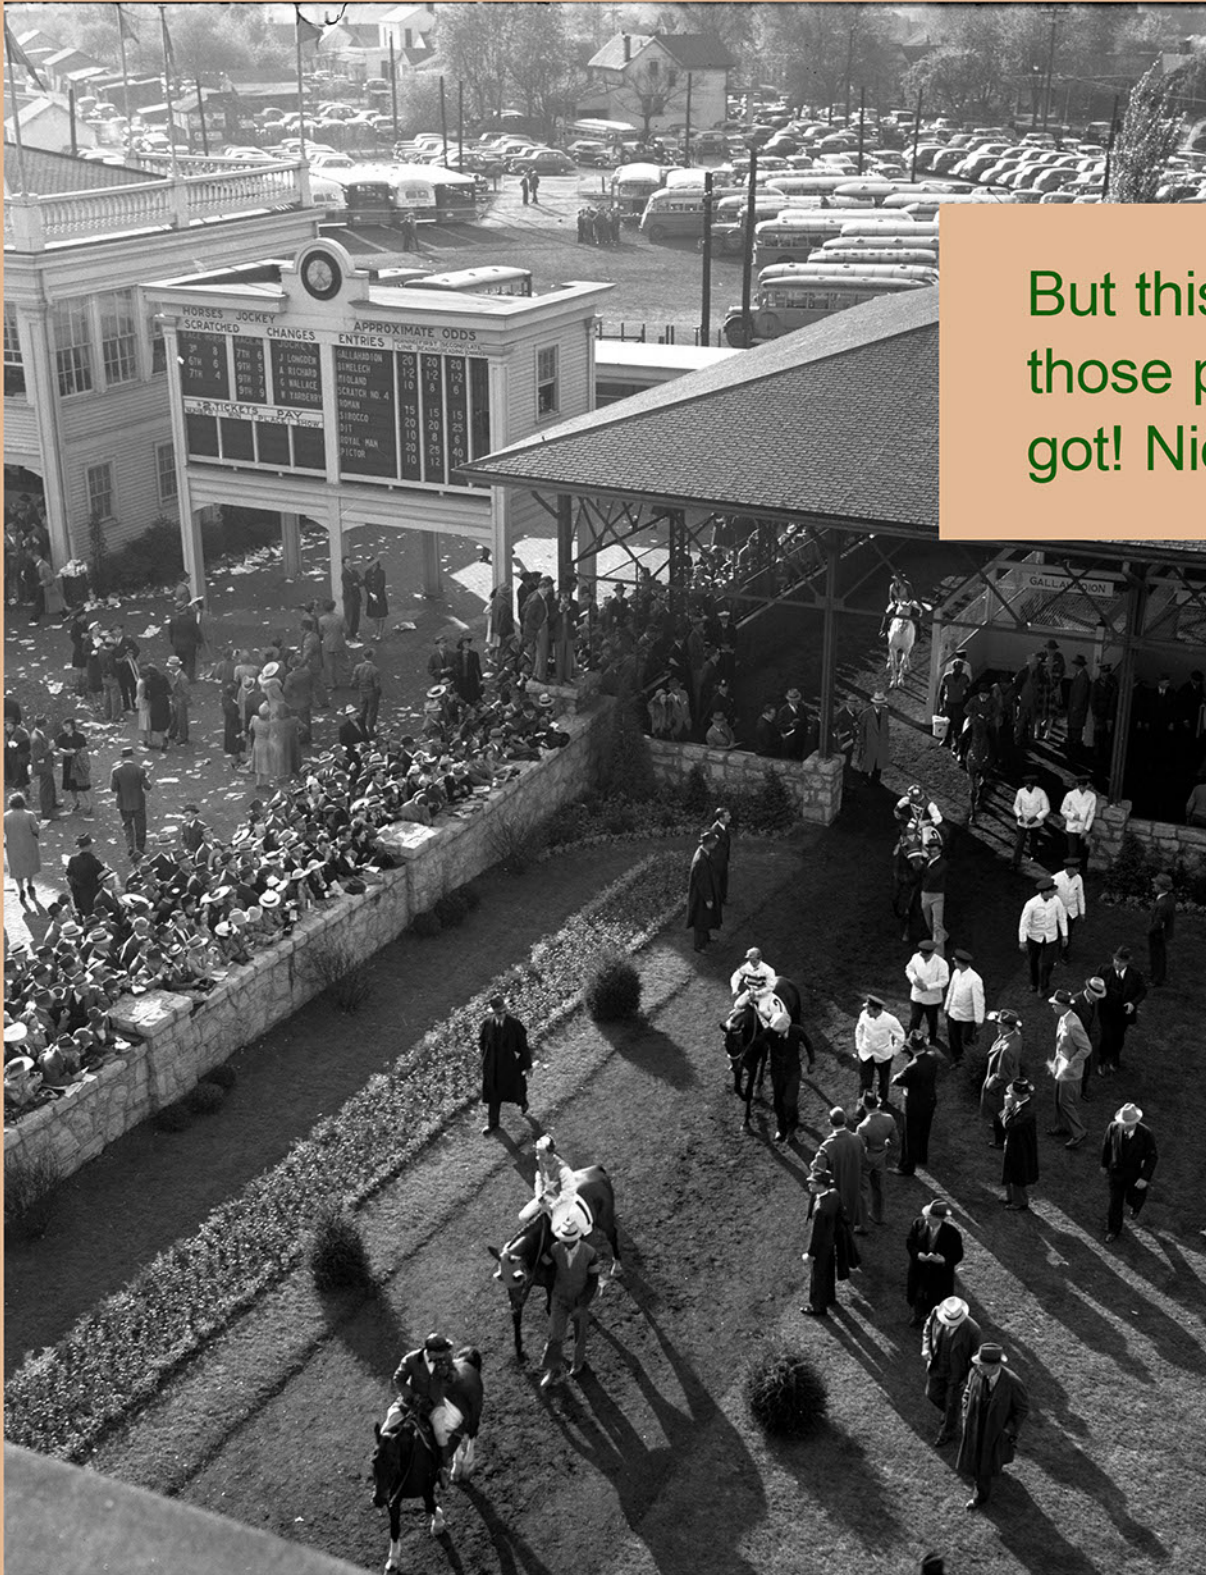

Roof party!

Photographers livin' on the edge!

But this is the shot those photographers got! Nice, right?

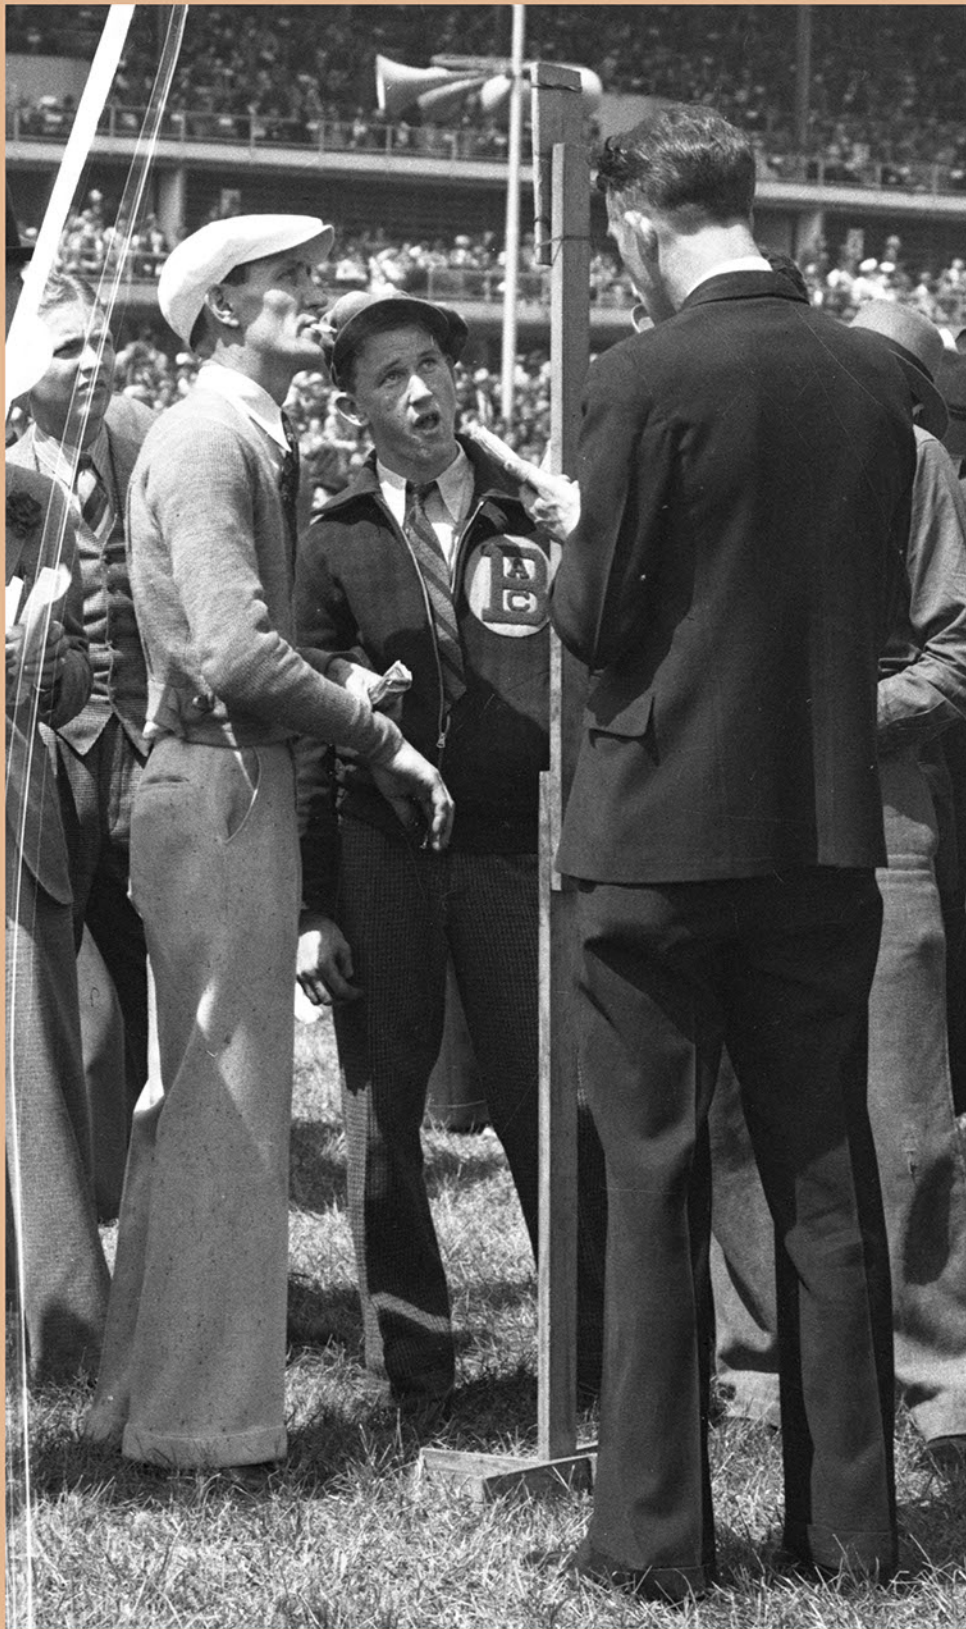

Photograph of the photographers (notice those beer bottles hanging around? --it's a thirsty job up there!)

Infield activity

Look at this short, sharp tie!

This budding entrepreneur looks to be selling some treats in the infield?

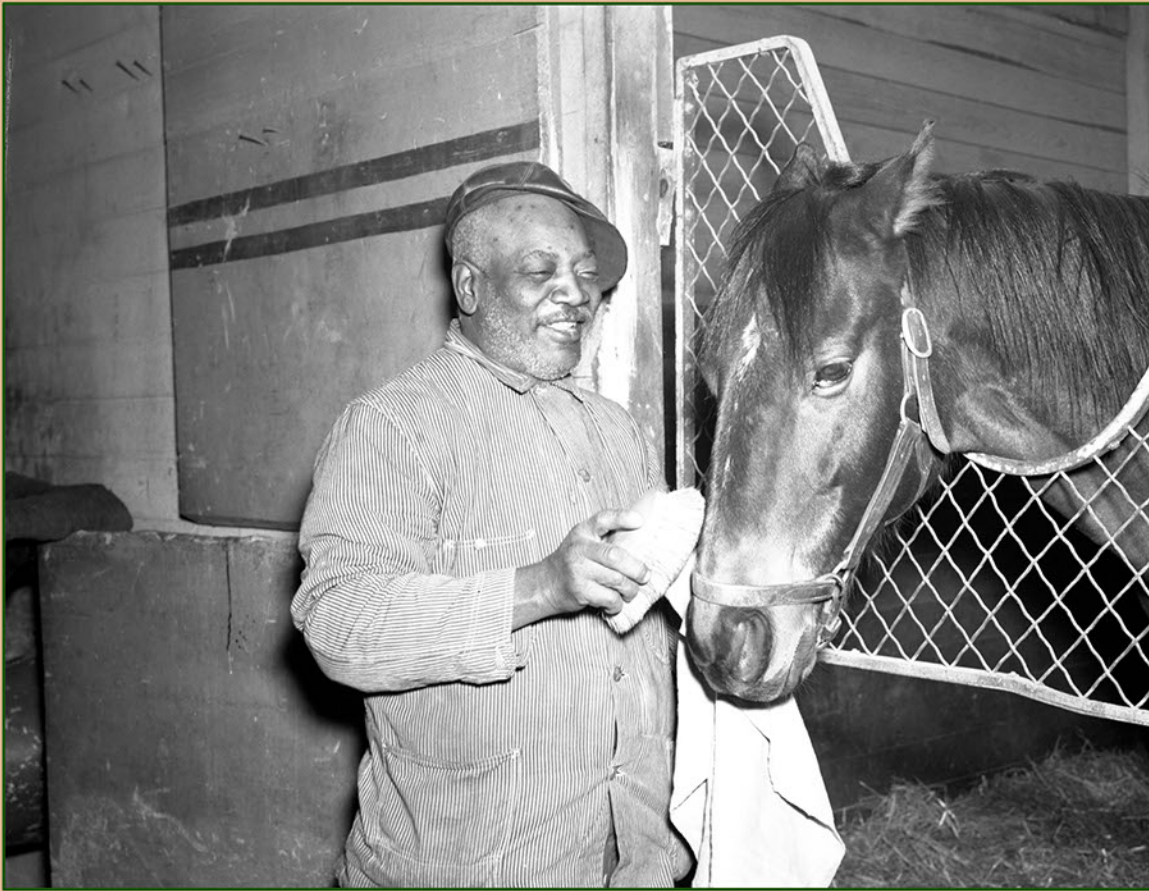

This gentleman in the infield is holding what looks to be a hand-made wooden sign. It also appears he is taking bets. Anyone know for sure what is going on here? Was this a way the infield spectators could bet? Was this a rogue bet taker or a service the track provided?

This is 1940.

Backside activities

This well-dressed man knows he's got the best job in the world.
And he's strutting around with that pipe!

All this guy wants is to be seen.

We feel the same buddy!
